900 residential units allowed per year

Growth management plan ok'd

By Lynne Locke Upland City Council Monday night unanimously approved a growth management plan which would limit the number of residential development applications to 900 units during

The council also approved a companion plan which would allow more beneficial projects to begin development before projects less beneficial to the city.

The application limit, which would allow 125 units in any one month or 500 units in a six-month period, provided enough control so that the city will "have a handle" on development, according to City Engineer Fred Blanchard, who

a few more units during one month

During heavy development periods staff members have noted the difficulty of checking all projects carefully enough to discover problem areas

Growth limit

The 900 limit takes into account the fact that some 70-80 per cent of approved projects actually take out building permits, providing an actual development rate of about 700 homes per year.

Blanchard said an average of 700 building permits per year has been issued in the last five years, which included periods of both low and high activity

The actual number for 1975-76 was 679 permits, with 876 issued in the 11-month period, ending May 31. Councilman Hal Bailin at first objected to basing the yearly limit on the number of projects the city staff The growth management plan was proposed to deal with the difficulty of providing services to match increased development, not to "make it more efficient" for the city staff, he commented

Bailin questioned whether 700 building permits per year is the number which would actually "severely and adversely impact the public facilities," as stated in the growth rate resolution.

Although he said the city staff hadn't presented any information showing that 700 building permits is the over-load point, other counindicated intention to follow the numbers recommended by the city staff.

Bailin also attempted to introduce greater flexibility in the monthly limits, but approved the staffrecommended resolution when he couldn't get council support for his own amendments. Point system

In addition to setting growth rate limits, the council approved a resolution setting up a point system to determine which residential pro-headed the team which formulated jects would receive first approval. Under the point system, Blanchard said, developers would be encouraged to produce a wellplanned project rather than just hurrying to be the first project Each proposed development would be rated for consistency with general and specific plans, location of development in relation to services, environmental and aesthetic qualities, social balance, and miscellaneous considerations. The Planning Commission would consider projects for approval on the basis of the number of points with the projects having the highest number of points being considered first and projects with lower points

A proposed development theoretically could receive a total of 127 points, but staff-formulated examples indicated that scores of 50-80 points could be considered high.

waiting for another month.

Under the rating system a proposed development could receive a maximum of 30 points for consistency with the general and specific plans including density, zoning, and location in the city.

A maximum of 31 points can be awarded to each project for the location of the development in relation to community services including police, fire, water mains, major streets, storm drains, sewer mains, bus service, schools, parks, commercial centers, and employment centers.

A project can earn up to 30 points for environmental and aesthetic qualities including street improvements, burglar alarms, security locks, additional open area, water-saving irrigation, recreational facilities, fire-resistent roofs, native plants in landscaping, preservation of existing trees, and on-site sewer and water systems.

A maximum of 20 points will be given for social factors such as construction to accommodate senior citizen or handicapped residents, low to moderate-income housing, arrangements with public transit, and architectural design to harmonize with the nieghborhood.

Each project could receive a maximum of 12 points for such miscellaneous considerations as a concept review by the Architectural Commission and thoroughness of the project in relation to Planning Department and Engineering Department standards.

Projects can also receive a maximum of four points for delays resulting from being passed over for consideration.

And that seems to be the reason these seniors spend their Tuesday and Thursday mornings at the YMCA. The class is offered free to them, but it is something they really get to participate in and by remaining active, they feel better and have a lot of fun doing exercises.

Here's the problem: Because of the growing

Now there's something we all can do to help: Spread the use of electricity more evenly around the clock. Edison is working with large industrial customers to help them find ways to shift some of their

$6.8 million in federal job money awaits West End

By PETER WONG More than $24 million in federal funds for public service jobs, including $6.8 million for five West End cities, was allocated Tuesday by the county board of supervisors. The funds, provided by the U.S. Department of Labor under the 1973 Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, could support as many as 1,400 additional public service jobs within San Bernardino County through Sept. 30, 1978.

The five cities - Ontario, Upland, Chino, Montclair and Fontana will get more than twice as much as they are currently receiving ($3 million). Ontario's share alone will jump from $1.3 million to $3 million.

However, much of the new money can be spent only after specific work projects for the federally funded employes are proposed by the cities and recommended by a regional

So far, the five cities have proposed projects which will require hiring of 109 additional employes at a total cost of $943,105, leaving $1,714,845 to be spent by late

The supervisors decided to give first hiring priority to welfare recipients. That will be coordinated with the state's Employment Development Department office in

However, employes whose salaries are paid by federal funds under two related programs will not have to be hired from among welfare recipients.

The supervisors decide what federal funds should go to 13 of the 14 cities in the county, school districts, special districts in unincorporated areas and the county government itself. The city of San Bernardino gets its funds separately.

The school districts' share of such funds is allocated by the county superintendent of schools

The supervisors spent relatively little time discussing the allocations to cities. They reviewed in great detail, however, the amounts proposed for specific work projects to be carried out by selected community organizations and the county government itself.

County departments have proposed 58 work projects at a cost of $4.2 million, but only $2,340,900 is available. The supervisors were expected to decide Wednesday which of those projectrs will be supported with federally funded employes.

They were also expected to evaluate the work projects proposed selected community organizations at a cost of $811.959.

Under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, which Congress has continued for another year as part of President Carter's economic stimulus plan at a nationwide cost of $8 billion, the federally financed jobs are classified under a variety of

Ontario justice complex focus of $145,000 study

A contract for drafting of a master plan for the West Valley law and justice complex in Ontario was awarded by the county board of supervisors.

The master plan is to be prepared by Gruen Associates, a Los Angeles firm, at a cost of $145,284

The plan will indicate the best use of office and courtroom space in the Ontario complex, at Mountain Avenue and Sixth Street, as well as space needs through 1990

Supervisors' Chairman Robert O. Townsend of Chino said that was a change from the original target date

Later this month, two county departments (public health and welfare) will move to their new location in the county branch office building in downtown Ontario, thus creating some additional space in the law and justice complex.

The consultant is to recommend how that space can best be used and what additional construction will be necessary within the 15-acre site to house the sheriff's office and jail, the district attorney's office, courtrooms, the probation department and related programs.

Representatives of those offices, along with County Administrative Officer Earl Goodwin and administrators of two county agencies, selected the consultant. The contract price was negotiated after the consultant's selection.

Some county supervisors suggested Tuesday that the contract be renegotiated to obtain a lower price, Townsend said.

Much of the additional money that local governments in San Bernardino County will receive in the next year - $8.5 million - will be directed toward specific work projects that are intended to bring some lasting benefit to the community.

The supervisors' move to assign first priority to welfare recipients for these jobs was in recognition of the possibility that the Carter administration is likely to impose such a requirement as part of its welfare reform program.

County Administrative Officer Earl Goodwin said that while the additional jobs in the specific work projects won't solve the county's unemployment problem, they might reduce the number of welfare recipients, thus saving the county

Those new jobs are classified under Title 6B of federal law.

Under a second program authorized by Title 2 of the 1973 law. job funds are provided to help areas of substantial unemployment such as the metropolitan region covered by San Bernardino and Riverside

Another program was added by Congress in 1974 as Title 6 (now 6A) of the act. The program was enacted in the midst of the 1974-75 recession as a means of stimulating employment.

Local cities are now receiving $1,104,831 under Title 2 of the act. The new allocations approved Tuesday by the supervisors will give the cities $2,262,060 of what Goodwin called the act's "most flexible" money

The cities will also continue to receive $1,912,000 to maintain 152 jobs under the current Title 6 program.

Specific allocations to West End cities are as follows:

Title 2: Ontario, $1,017,393, up from $489,084; Upland, $416,120, up from $198,320; Chino, $200,905, up from $101,545; Montclair, $339,377. up from $171,977; Fontana, $288,265, up from $$143,905

Title 6A: Ontario, $794,000 Upland, $384,000; Chino, $165,000; Montclair, $301,000; Fontana.

Title 6B: Ontario, $1.246,950; Upland, $514,250; Chino, $160,650 (it returned $74,244); Montclair, $395,250: Fontana, $340,850.

Most for Prado Park lake

West End gains park funds

More than $1 million in state funds for park development, almost all of which will be spent in the West End, has been allocated by the county board of supervisors.

About half that amount will finance further development of Prado Regional Park south of Chino. Most of the rest will be spent for work at Cucamonga - Guasti Regional Park and the Rains House in Cucamonga.

The county itself received $750,000 from last year's state bond issue for park development. Another $263,500 will be provided under a new state program to encourage urban park development.

Of the $750,000 from the bond issue, $511,640 will be spent on construction related to the creation of a 56-acre lake at Prado Regional

By offering opportunities for fishing and swimming, the lake is intended to attract more visitors to the regional park, one of two in the West End.

The lake will be created after two dams are built by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Both the corps, which has authority over the flood control basin in which Prado Regional Park is located, and the county have pledged $1.2 million for the lake project.

The county also plans to build a water treatment plant in the park. That plant will treat wastewater so that it can be made safe for fish and other aquatic life.

Wastewater discharged from the Chino regional treatment plant operated by the Chino Basin Municipal Water District will help fill the park's big lake.

During the plant's treatment process, chlorine is added before wastewater is discharged. However, the resulting levels of chlorine will kill fish which are going to be placed in the park's lake. A study by the California Department of Fish and Game is expected to show how that problem can be resolved. At Cucamonga - Guasti Regional Park, state funds will be spent on two major projects One will allow the handicapped to have better access to the park's fishing lakes, as well as provide for additional landscaping and paving.

The cost of that project estimated at $234,750, will be financed by $103,000 from the state bond issue, $98,750 from the state's new urban park development program, and $33,000 from the county's allocation of federal revenue sharing funds.

Under the other project, estimated at $219,000, the county will acquire 16.4 acres for the park. That will be paid for by $164,250 from the state urban park development program and $54,750 from the county's allocation of federal revenue sharing funds.

The federal funds represent the county's matching amount as required by the state program. Another $75,000 from last year's state bond issue for will pay for landscaping, parking and restoration work at the Rains House in Cucamonga. The remaining funds from the state bond issue ($60,360) will pay for work at Glen Helen Regional

The answer to that question has been answered at least partially by a recent survey of 700 homeshoppers at 16 different Southern California new home developments with prices ranging from $32,000 to $120,000.

Conducted by Walker & Lee, Inc., the Anaheimbased residential real estate services company, the survey provided some precise answers, as recently revealed by Robert Lind, vice president of marketing services and Sandra Heger, research associate.

Today's 'composite homeshopping buying unit,' Lind said, "has a 33.5-year

If you're one of the thousands of Americans devoted to storing away the glory of the summer for winter eating, then you may already be knee-deep in zucchini or buried in berries.

USDA now recommends processing jams, preserves and pickles in a water bath canner so a canner or a saucepot is a must. The saucepot should be deep enough to allow water to cover the jars with room to boil freely, and a rack should be placed in the pot so jars won't touch bot-

Once the canning equipment is ready, pick a favorite fruit or vegetable to put up. There's a whole crop of fresh canning ideas in corn syrup's leaflet, 'From Garden To Jar.' # Price value

We often fail to recognize the true value of eggs because they are sold by the dozen while other protein foods, like meat and cheese, are sold by the pound. A dozen large eggs weigh a minimum of 24 ounces or a pound and a half. If large eggs are selling for 80 cents a dozen, they're 54 cents a pound with no bone, little waste and no shrinkage during proper cooking. If you look along the meat case you'll find very little that can compare with this group not backing repeal is the federal civil service - the people alleged to be suffering because of the prohibitions. Polls consistently show that federal workers regard the act as a form of protection from partisan coercion, rather than as a threat to their political freedom.

On the other hand, the strongest supporters of repeal are found in the leadership of the increasingly powerful public employe unions, along with their camp followers in Congress larded the repeal legislation with "safeguards" to prevent political pressure on career government workers. But these safeguards would not be as effective as the stronger prohibitions of the Hatch Act itself and even the act can be circumvented, as it was recently during the Nixon administration. If there is a need, it may be for a stronger Hatch Act, not a weaker substitute.

Abuse of government employes has been distressingly bipartisan. The Hatch Act followed revelations of political pressures on the federal service during the administration of Franklin Roosevelt. It extended the application of numerous reforms enacted in response to the excesses of the old "spoils system" in the late 19th century.

The major prohibitions in the Hatch Act are as follows: soliciting campaign funds from fellow workers, using federal office for political purposes, taking an active part in parunions, using civil servants tisan campaign manage-(and the federal payroll) to ment, and running for office

Pop Music Critic Wild Cherry, a group that took their name from a box of coughdrops, according to Cherry's drummer Ron Beitle, has created a type of music they call "electrified

According to lead guitarist and vocalist Bob Parissi electrified funk is "r&b music done our own - with a rock - and roll flavor, with guitar leads like a rock - and - roll band would do That's what it is. We're trying to do that type of music in a white way, like Vanilla Fudge did to the Motown thing or Three Dog Night did to, you know, the old blues songs, and what Eric Clapton did."

Recently, Wild Cherry was in Hollywood to perform at the Roxy, for interviews and to tape the Mike Douglas show.

The interview was not as Parissi, Beitle, lead guitarist Bryan Basset; bass and synthesizer, Allen Avsec; and their newest member, guitarist and conga player Coogie Stoddart were extremely polite and

Cherry's beginning

Wild Cherry began as a top-40 band, and in fact Stoddart, the newest member, was a member of the original band. But it broke up and Stoddart and the rest of the old W.C. went their separate ways.

"I got the new band 'Yea we were honored to together with Bryan and he came with us," Parissi explained. "Sort of like all and then we tried to get a hold of Ron. We had another drummer and while we had the other drummer we kept While at the grammy asking Ron to come with us.

Parissi added: "I knew every time we've worked asset to the band. So I just called him and asked him to come back."

After Coogie was back, Wild Cherry was ready to tackle the job that would eventually lead them to that number one position on Billboard along with the Grammy nomination.

While playing in discos, Wild Cherry studied the disco music and tried to figure out just how they could change it to fit their style. But Parissi felt the disco music was over orchestrated. He was convinced there was nothing rock - and - roll bands could do that was danceable.

Playing in a disco but not being able to deliver the same sort of dance punch, Wild Cherry started to feel

Parissi continued: "That's when Ron said, 'I
